Saying "Okay"

People ask, "I've been visualizing something, then I get what feels like Divine Inspiration to take a particular step, which I do, but then nothing happens. What's going on? Am I reading the signs wrong?"

No, you are most likely not reading the signs wrong, you're just expecting certain results and then become disappointed when you don't see those results. Divine Inspiration always comes from your Higher Self or Soul, usually in the form of intuition or synchronicities. Divine Inspiration is always that wiser, all-knowing part of you trying to steer you. It's only the human mind that sees things linearly, thinking, "If I do this, then that will happen." The Universe doesn't work that way; it works in a more circular or spiraling process or even, if you can visualize this, in a web-like fashion.

Let's use an example. Let's say that you want a new job, one in which you can be more creative. You visualize (or more accurately, feeling-ize) what it would feel like to be in this new, fun, creative job. One day, you feel a strong impulse to call a certain company to see if they are hiring. You make the call, filled with hope that they might say, "Perfect timing! We're looking for a person with exactly your skills and background. Start on Monday." Oh, wouldn't that be fantastic, to have it be so easy, to suddenly be on your way to a more fun, creative job! So you make the call, only to be told, "Thanks, but we're not hiring right now."

Your mind might immediately start thinking, 'What happened? Am I off my rocker? This inspired action stuff doesn't work!' However, you only think it's not working because you expected a certain outcome to the action you were called to take. There could be many reasons why you were inspired to make that call, and the way this whole Universal system works is that you often don't know the why of what you're called to do. It could be that the call you made will open up a door for you at that company a month down the road, or perhaps the person you spoke with suddenly starts thinking about creating a new position just like the one you want, but it's at their own company that they're secretly building with their cousin, and you'll see an online job posting 3 weeks from now. Or maybe the whole scenario of being guided to make that call was about allowing yourself to get into a strong, hopeful feeling space of what it would be like to land your dream job. When you're in that hopeful space, you're activating the Dream Job vibration, which could be setting off a whole other set of circumstances that will lead to your job popping up in a totally unrelated area.

You just don't know. That's the point. "Why?" is just not really the question to be asking the Universe when you get Divine Inspiration. In fact, there isn't an appropriate question to be asking, but only an appropriate response when your intuition guides you to take action. That response is, "Okay."

Readers' Section The Perfect Outcome

"When we remember that the source of all our good is the Universe, not a company, job, client, or spouse, we align ourselves with that power. It may be reasonable to be cautious, but then we must trust in universal order.

"The Universe is capable of maintaining the orbit of the planets and the blooming of flowers, so the details of your life are not outside of its abilities. There may be something even better for you than what you had planned that is already in motion. When we turn to the Universe to find solutions for our worries today, its immense power directs us toward the perfect outcome."
