Guided by your own uniqueness

For as long as I can remember, I've been asking the questions, "Why are we here?" and "Why am I here?" I give this a lot of thought, and have actually dedicated my life to figuring this out and helping others who might be wondering the same thing.

Almost everything I write, in articles, books, websites, newsletters, emails and journals has to do with answering these questions. So there's a whole lot I could say about the subject. Today, I'd like to address uniqueness.

I believe that we are all unique expressions of Source Energy, and that we're here on Earth to explore and express that uniqueness. You have skills, talents and your own special way of seeing this world -- different from everyone around you and different from anyone else who ever lived. The real art of living comes in expressing that uniqueness. It's both the "juice" of life and your gift to others.

What do you love to do? What brings you joy, rings your bell, and lights you up? When at all possible, follow that. Those feelings of joy, passion and excitement come from within you; they are messages your Soul is giving you about your uniqueness and what you came here to express and experience.

I wrote an article a couple of years ago that goes into this subject more. If you'd like to read, "What is my Soul's Expression?" you can find it on the Articles page on my website, www.BelieveInYourDreams.net

While you're there, check out the total redesign of the website, complete with a Universal Eye of Possibility at the top.

And for the rest of today, think about those qualities that make you Uniquely You, and find ways to express your uniqueness.
